More than ever, owners of rental property are real estate business people. Increasing price pressure and the shift from a landlords' market to a tenants' market means that profitable property administration is possible only with long-term planning and efficient cost controlling.

As an attorney for enterprising people, I not only know the market and share your perspective - I also advise you in all tenancy and property issues and help you to act on your rights. Efficiency and profitability are the standards you can measure my work by. I advise my clients effectively because I think in business terms as well - and know that their investment in legal counsel needs to pay off.
